Culture

We give here best method for growing, however many have their own methods with fine results, if successful stay with your own method soil mixture is 1 part garden soil 1 place well rotted cow manure, 1 part black peat or 2 parts oak leaf mold, add 1 part sand to this place a little charcoal to each rot of soil, this keeps soil from souring. Many other soil mixtures have been used with success, all are good as long as rich and procous providing good drainage.

POTTING—place peace of broken pot in bottom of pot then fill with soil. Do not plant deep as this will cause rot. Single crown plants are the best so divide your old plants when appearing crowded.

Watering when soil appeared dry on top of pot set pot in pan of water watering from bottom, never pour water on plant unless when washing plant then have water same or warmer than room temperature as cold water spots folage and causes crown rot. Never let violets become dry as to be limp as this is usually fatal.

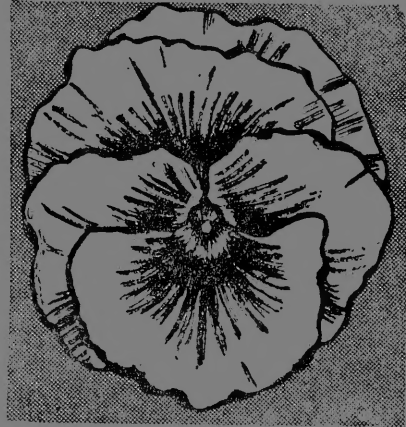

TEMPERATURE and LIGHT—Violets love a warm humid place, will not take full sun, best plants are grown in good light as north or east window temperature should never below 55, best is about 75 to 80.

FEEDING—for best blooming plants they should be fel regularly HYPONEX 1 spoon to Gal. water about every 2 to 4 weeks, especially double varieties.

PROPAGATION—is done by divisions, leaf cuttings or seed. Leaf cutting being the most popular. Cut leaf with about 1 in. stem, place in rooting medium in about 3 to 6 weeks plants will appear pot off as large enough. Medium we use is Terrlite, sand is also good, many root in water. Propigation from seed is interesting as new varieties are found in this way, sow very fine seed on top of fine Terrlite placed in plastic refrigator jar with hole drilled in bottom for drainage water from bottom cover place in well lit warm place not sun, wipe condensed moisture from lid when needed in 2 to 4 weeks plants will appear lift lid slightly for air pot as large enough.

Following is list of plants we ship and propagate we are always adding new ones also discard varieties which

HERB SEEDS

Sow seeds of the annual herbs out of doors at early corn planting time in your locality, or when the maples start to leaf out. The perennial herbs should besown early in the spring for best results though they may be sown later or even in early fall in many sections.

Annuals are designated by an "A" after the name while Perennials are followed by the letter "P." For descriptions, see plant list.

Gardening is easy. The beauty of it is that you can do the job on as small or as large a scale as you like, from a flower pot to a park. You can adopt gardening to suit your own liking, as a hobby, or a business, or combined. Many gardening hobbies grow into fine businesses. Small sun porches, etc., are often diverted into a fine propagation room for house plants which are readily sold. Many herb gardens become a cottage business, as there is always a demand for fresh herbs once the public finds out about them. Young tender leaf lettuce is preferred by many. A large quantity of these plants can be grown on a very small plot. Violets, house plants and herbs are a good combination.

About insecticides, we use N N O R freely on African Violets and all tender plants for all insects. Red Arrow is also very effective.

Try dampening a soft cloth in sour milk and wipe off foliage on plants. This cleans and gives foliage a healthy look..

Attract small birds to your garden by setting up a few bird houses and feeding stations, they will repay you several times over in destroying insects.

Geraniums like small pots and a poor soil. Keep on dry side before blooming.

Ferns and palms respond well by being fed a little dried blood meal bone. Feed blood meal to Begonias and Violets.

A little Hyponex to the lily pool makes all water plants respond.

Plant water lillies in rich soil mostly composed of cow manure and sand.

A flagstone walk with Thyme planted along it is attractive and fragrant when walked upon.

Plant mints in sunken tin tubs, etc., with bottoms out and about two inches above soil line. This keeps them in bounds.

One part cinders, one part sawdust, two parts rich garden soil makes a good porous potting soil for African Violets, Gloxianias and Begonias.

For those not familiar with named plants in each section, we list collections. These will include many new varieties and the best of old varieties. This is an economical way to get acquainted and started. All plants labeled with instructions when ordered. In multipuls each collection will be different, all our selection.
